Career Courses Freeman School: CDMA

CDMA 1201 Career Development and Management I (2)

- This course is the required foundational career education course for all Freeman undergraduates. The course offers a blended approach with online content, videos and interactives that can be revisited and reinforced during the entire academic tenure at Freeman. Students learn how to interpret their individual career assessment, do extensive research and targeting, develop an effective contact network and execute successful internship and job search strategies. Students will leave the class with the tools necessary to build a career plan. Guest speakers from a variety of business backgrounds and one-on-one meetings with CMC Career Consultants supplement course learnings.

CDMA 4020 Advanced Career Development and Management

- Advanced Career Development & Management is designed to draw on students' knowledge developed in previous Career Education classes and give them the confidence to launch and manage a job search strategy that will result in multiple offers. Students will practice presenting a case interview and explore how they can use their job search skills to build a lifelong career. Using the tools provided in this course along with one-on-one Career Consulting in the Career Management Center, students will be able to master the seemingly complex task of finding that next important career opportunity.

Career Courses NTC Career Services: CRDV

CRDV 1060 Exploring Majors and Careers (1)

- Students will engage in self-assessment and exploration surrounding their major and career goals to concretely identify avenues to achieve career-related goals such as major declaration, securing internships, and exploring different career paths. The course may only be taken once for credit.

CRDV 1070 Preparing for Jobs, Internships, and Graduate School (1)

- Students will learn the importance of developing their personal brand, establishing a professional network, and applying current career knowledge to achieve career-related goals such as applying for graduate school, securing a job after graduation, and preparing for a successful post-graduation transition.
